INNATE VOICE

Since our early childhood we have been interacting with our environment. We observe, learn and imitate. This is instrumental in our development.

At the same time we can become so fixated on the other person that we forget to trust our true self and as a result become a copy of our environment.

With the following simple yet powerful set of questions we can pierce through complexity and find our innate voice to face the challenges of life.

This tool is about whole-person approach. This requires a deepening of our learning process by cultivating curiosity (open mind), compassion (open heart), and courage (open will).

By opening up to what lives deep within us, by listening to our innate voice, we can connect to and be guided by our internal GPS. This allows us to discover new perspectives in challenges we have to face in life.

Use it with individuals and or teams.

With more than 20 years of experience as a tax specialist, manager, personal coach and trainer for the profit and non-profit sector, I have a broad background.

I bridge the gap between the cognitive world and the world of intuition. The desire to make the most of someone's potential resonates in me.

I believe and know by experience, even when we find ourselves in an unnatural or challenging setting, when a person's trust is with the process and their true power (assuming every person is naturally creative, resourceful and whole), this person will have room to thrive. By opening up to what lives deep within us, listening to our innate voice, we can connect to and be guided by our internal GPS. <https://www.patriciaverweij.nl>
